

WARREN BUFFETT ON NEGATIVE INTEREST RATES: OUR MONEY WOULD BE BETTER OFF IN A MATTRESS (VIDEO)

Feb 29, 2016 | Curated by BisnowTV

Facebook

Twitter

LinkedIn

Email

Print

With negative interest rates coming into play from Tokyo to Stockholm, investing heavyweight Warren Buffett is weighing in on one of the latest macro-economic experiments.

While some remain hot on the policy, Buffett tells CNBC the new policy "distorts everything" and nobody has really gone through an extended period of low rates like these.

With negative interest rate policies, Buffett adds, his European funds "would be better off" in a big mattress. "Interest rates are like gravity in valuations," he says in our Video Of The Day. "If interest rates are nothing, values can be almost infinite."

